FOREWORD

Since our Independence thirty years ago, we have been rightly concerned about the present poverty of our people and the future economic perspectives that are open to us as a country. Accordingly, we have invested all our time, human and financial resources in applying science and technology to the current and future sources of our living, launching on the Green Revolution which has brought to us self-sufficiency in food, building an industrial infrastructure which has made us the tenth most industrialised nation and developing the third largest cadre of scientists and technologists among the nations. More recently we have given democracy a new dimension, in ushering in a peaceful political revolution, which we hope will bring in the new egalitarian society to which all of us - regardless of party - are committed.

In face of this rapid and breath-taking change which has become part of our individual and collective lives over the last three decades, it is well that we stop - even if it be for a moment - in our speeding journey and look at our past. At this time when we are catapulting ourselves into the future of sufficiency and well-being for all, there is need for the function of memory to ensure that our future is being built on solid creative foundations and not on ephemeral passing goals. And that is what this work aims at: it aims at pointing to one of the heritages of our culture – Sanskrit -, as the unspoken source and silent spring of our present elan and the trajectory of our future. Never before in our long history, I believe, have our people - of the country as Indians and of the State as Tamilians - evinced such a searching curiosity about their past or expended as much efforts in preserving its pristine purity as they have done in the last 30 years.

But this is also an international enterprise with universal overtones and a world wide audience. At a period of history when mankind has launched out from this planet to the Moon, Mars, Venus and outerspace, the interest of mankind in its past on this planet has become wider, deeper and more insatiable. And Sanskrit, Prakrit and Pali belong to this our common tradition of world history and hence command world attention.

This publication of the University of Madras, the New Catalogus Catalogorum, is an expression of this deep curiosity and persevering effort. It is a 20 volume programme, giving details about the location of manuscripts, publications and studies in and on the works of Sanskrit, Prakrit and Pali and the men and women who authored them, along with their chronology and places of creative production.

By its very nature, this is a long drawn out enterprise. It was started in 1935 in the Sanskrit Department of the University, where it still lives and grows. The first volume was born a decade and half later in 1949. This is the ninth volume, which means that we are not quite half near our goal.

The Catalogus has attracted international and national cooperation. The Rockefeller Foundation was associated with it for some time and then the University Grants Commission assisted it for 10 years during the Third and Fourth Plan. The All-India Oriental Conference, the International Conference of Human Sciences of Asia and North Africa, and Unesco's International Council of Philosophy and Human Sciences have provided and are continuing to give it their strong moral support and sponsorship. It is an essential part of mankind's memory, it is of that creative nostalgia, from which all masterpieces of the human mind are born.

And so I am grateful to the Government of Tamil Nadu, who from this year have taken over the financial commitment for making sure that this great enterprise is completed. And completed it will be by 1985. That is the pledge and promise of the University of Madras and its Department of Sanskrit.

PREFACE

Volume Nine of the New Catalogus Catalagorum now being presented to scholars deals with Sanskrit and allied works and authors from Dā to Na in the alphabetical order. The general pattern of the previous volumes has been followed. Complete lists of Catalogues, reference books etc., will be found in Volumes I and II of the New Catalogus Catalogorum; only those additionally used for this volume and not given in previous volumes are given here with their abbreviations.

The University Grants Commission had been helping the project during the third and fourth plan periods. They were not able to continue their financial help and the entire project was on the verge of closure by the end of March 1976. Scholars all over the world sympathised with us and wrote about the importance of the Catalogus Catalogorum project. The All India Oriental Conference held at Ujjain in 1972 and the International Conference of Human Sciences held at Mexico in 1976 passed resolutions emphasizing the need for the speedy completion of the project. Still the project would not have continued but for the timely initiative taken by our dynamic Vice-Chancellor Dr. Malcolm S. Adiseshiah and the consequent assistance sanctioned by the Tamilnadu Government. I am extremely grateful to the Vice-Chancellor for the sympathetic encouragement and timely help and also for his Foreword to this volume.

I am thankful to the members of the Staff of the New Catalogus Catalogorum, past and present for their devoted work and to the Bharati Vijayam Press for their cooperation.

दिङ्नाग

—Kundamālā. See Dhīranāga.

दिङ्नाग or Dignāga. Bud. logician born in Siṁhavaktra near Kāñcī (according to Tārānātha); studied under Vasubandhu and lived mostly in Kaliṅga; younger contemporary of Bhartṛhari (about 30 verses of whose Vākyapadīya were taken with minor alterations in his Traikālikaparīkṣā). C. 450–500 A. D. Dr. Warder assigns him to the second half of the 4th century; 400–480 acc. to Nakamura and 480–540 acc. to Frauwallner.

See A.K. Warder, Indian Buddhism, Delhi, 1970, pp. 447–62; Outline of Indian Philosophy. Delhi, 1971, pp. 173–90; WZKSO. V. p. 125.

Several works are ascribed to him, but the original of most of them are lost; some are preserved in Tibetan translations and some in Chinese. Vācaspatimiśra quotes some passages from Diṅnāga in his Nyāyavārttikatātparyaṭīkā. According to Mallinātha and Dakṣiṇāvartanātha, Kālidāsa refers to him in Meghadūta, 1. 14.

Regarding his theory of Apoha, see K. Kunjunni Raja, Indian Theories of Meaning, 1969, p. 82ff.

Candrakīrti criticises his views. See J. of Indian & Bud. Studies, Tokyo, II. 1953–54, pp. 222–25 (Japanese).

A verse attributed to him in Sbhv. (3437) is found in Mahābhārata.

नलोदन्त purāvṛtta. Kavīndrācārya 1452.

नलोदय yamaka poem in four Āśvāsas dealing with the story of Nala and Damayantī; often ascribed to Kālidāsa or Abhinavakālidāsa; the commentator Rāmarṣi (C. 1600 A.D.) attributes it to Ravideva (JRAS. Extra no. 1887, p. 337) and some mss. attribute it to Ravideva, son of Nārāyaṇa (BORI. D. XIII. i. 306, TD. 3811); V. Rajarajavarma Raja tries to identify this Ravideva with the father of Vāsudeva (a. of Yudhiṣṭhiravijaya); A. S. Ramanatha Ayyar ascribed this work to Vāsudeva himself on the basis of the col. of a ms. (JRAS. 1925, p.208); Zachariae (ZII. IV. p. 225) and Keith (HSL. p. 97ff) are inclined to accept this view; some other mss. ascribe the poem to Keśavāditya also (BORI. D. XIII. i. 307. 309). The text refers to King Rājāditya, which according to the commentator Viṣṇu is the title of King Rāma after his coronation; this stands in the way of ascribing it to Vāsudeva (whose patron was Rāma with the title Kulaśekhara). On the problem see K. Kunjunni Raja, Contribution of Kerala to Skt. Lit. pp. 22ff; A. S. Ramanatha Ayyar, JRAS. 1925, pp. 263–75.
